Hiring Manager
ION Solar

Re: Operations Manager

Getting a solar project from signed contract to permission to operate is mostly a handoff problem. I learned that in 2021 running post sale operations for ION's Las Vegas and Arizona markets, and it's why this opening in Orem caught my eye.

Projects back then stalled between departments, and nobody could easily see where. I tightened up our status tracking, found the bottlenecks, and got the right teams working on them together. Our PTO processing rate rose 57%. Since then I've written construction SOPs and set up inventory, fleet, and quality controls for a Lehi home builder. At Lion Energy I improved a return operation handling about 10,000 units a year, cutting resolution time roughly in half.

Leading people is the other half of this job. At Vivint I helped grow an installation support team from about 20 reps to more than 50, and later coordinated a four person analytics team that built the dashboards leadership used to manage installs. And I still sell energy management today, so I hear every week what customers expect after the sale. I'd like to sit down and walk through how I'd attack your department's bottlenecks in the first 90 days. When works for you?

Sincerely,

Eric Howes
